Q4 2025 Fund Commentary

Commentary and opinions are provided by Canada Life.

Market commentary

While headline inflation started to move lower during the fourth quarter of 2025, measures of core inflation remained at the higher end of the 1–3% target band. The breakeven curve remained flat, reflecting expectations that near-term inflation had returned to being in line with long-term expectations. Breakeven rates remained largely unchanged but increased slightly by the end of the year. This reflected concerns that inflation might be coming back into play, partly related to increased government deficits and associated issuance.

Performance

Overweight exposure to a real return bond issued by the Government of Canada (4% due 2031) contributed to the Fund's performance. Underweight exposure to a real return bond issued by the Government of Canada (4.25% due 2026) detracted from performance.

Overweight exposure to provincial inflation-linked product contributed to the Fund's performance. The sub-advisor holds the position because of the rarity of the product, and for the additional yield it provides. Security selection within provincial inflation-linked bonds detracted from performance. The Fund holds an overweight position in Province of Quebec bonds, which were the weakest performers.

Portfolio activity

The sub-advisor increased exposure to provincial bonds as withdrawals were completed using federal bond holdings. The Fund's holdings were reduced across the yield curve in response to client withdrawals.

Outlook

The sub-advisor will continue to manage the Fund's duration (sensitivity to interest rates) and positioning in conjunction with the view on interest rates. There are no large moves planned for the Fund due to lack of issuance in the product and reduced liquidity in the space.
